EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Thirty-seven states participated in the NASS 2007-2008 New Millennium State Practices Survey, which is based upon responses submitted to the association in December 2007. This compilation report is designed as a resource for NASS members, advocacy groups, state lawmakers, colleges and secondary schools, and any other entity that might find this snapshot of state election office outreach work useful.

Apart from the fact that it is a broad but incomplete examination of outreach activities among the states, readers should take into account the jurisdictional differences that exist between secretaries of state, as well as between secretaries of state and other chief state election officials. Thirty-seven secretaries of state serve as chief state election official (a full list is available at www.nass.org), including the Office of the New Jersey Secretary of State, which took over this duty in 2008. Tennessee's Secretary of State also has responsibility for elections, but is not the legally-designated chief state election official (this duty goes to the state elections director). Alaska and Utah, two of the three states that do not have a secretary of state position, assign elections oversight duties to their lieutenant governors. In the ten remaining states, elections are overseen and administered by a state elections board or a similar entity.

In short, it's important for voters to know who is responsible for administering elections in their state so that they can get the best information possible when trying to navigate the network of federal, state and local laws that govern our democratic process. This document is designed to help young voters—particularly first-time voters—with that task.

Young Voter/Civics Education Outreach Programs

Sixty-eight percent (68%) of secretary of state offices that participated in this survey conduct outreach directed at young people, typically in the high school to college-age range (16-24).

Nearly sixty percent (57%) of state offices said they plan to introduce new voter education or poll worker recruitment programs in 2008 targeting young people.

Outreach Partnerships with Local or County Election Offices

State election officials clearly rely upon local and county officials for help in coordinating young voter outreach. Nearly all of our respondents (97%) reported partnering with local or county clerk offices to coordinate voter education & voter registration/outreach efforts. Seventy-six percent (76%) of these offices are primarily focusing on voter education.

Poll Worker/Election Day Volunteer Laws

Eighty-one percent (81%) of states that responded now allow for poll workers or Election Day volunteers between the ages of 16-17 years-old (SEE TABLE 1). A full state-by-state listing of these laws is available on Page 4.

Methods of Young Voter Outreach

The strategies that state election offices are using to reach young voters do not vary much from the traditional methods used to reach older voters. However, this year's survey shows an increase in the use of social networking sites, such as MySpace and Facebook, to reach this age group. The results also indicate an increase in online tools for educating and empowering voters, with the State of Washington becoming the second state (Arizona was first) to offer online voter registration to attract young people to the process.

Table 1: Teen Poll Worker/Election Day Volunteer Laws

Overall, the survey results show:

- Seventy percent (70%) of respondents reported the use of mock elections to educate young people about registration and voting.
- Sixty-two percent (62%) reported the use of voting equipment displays and demonstrations to educate young people about voting. The same number (62%) also reported the use of public service announcements (PSAs) and voter guides for this purpose, while fifty-one percent (51%) said they distribute pamphlets.
- Forty-six percent (46%) reported the use of Internet resources, such as state Web sites and social networking sites such as MySpace and Facebook, to educate young people about registration and voting.
- Forty-three percent (43%) reported the use of citizenship presentations and related school-based resources to educate young people about voting.
- Forty-one percent (41%) reported the use of instructional videos for young voter outreach, both for registration and voting purposes, as well as for poll worker training and recruitment.

Same-Day/Election Day Registration

Eight states that responded to our survey (27%) allow for same-day or Election Day registration (SEE TABLE 2). A state-by-state listing is available on Page 5.

Residential Provisions for College Student Voters

Forty-three percent (43%) of states that participated in this survey provided specific guidance for college students who wish to register to vote using their dorm as a primary residence. This year's report includes this information for the first time.

Funding for State Office Outreach

- Eighty-six percent (86%) of the state election offices in this survey carry out voter education and outreach work, as well as poll worker recruitment and training, using federal funds provided to states for these purposes as part of the Help America Vote Act of 2002 (HAVA).
- Seventy-three percent (73%) of the state election offices in this survey depend upon some amount of state funding (usually their own office budget) to conduct their youth outreach work.
- Twenty-four percent (24%) of state election offices that participated in this survey rely upon additional funding from public-private partnerships.
- Five percent of respondents said they get additional funding for their work from other sources.

National Partnerships

NASS asked its members to identify which of the association's national partner groups they are working with at the state level. Amongst survey respondents, the most common partnerships include National Student/Parent Mock Election, Overseas Vote Foundation, and Kids Voting USA.

Table 2: States with Same-Day/
Election Day Registration

The percentages of state offices that work with NASS partner groups are shown in the following list:

National Student/Parent Mock Election	43%
Overseas Vote Foundation	35%
Kids Voting USA	30%
WWE Smackdown Your Vote! Coalition	22%
Close Up Foundation	14%
Declare Yourself	14%
Capitol Forum	8%
University of Virginia Youth Leadership	5%
People of America Foundation	3%

Some states have formed additional partnerships or working relationships with state agencies or state-based nonprofit groups, and we have listed those relationships as part of each state's profile page.

Innovative Approaches

Four years ago, NASS began encouraging members to focus on improving and expanding poll worker recruitment and training programs targeting young people as part of its New Millennium Young Voters Project outreach efforts. That included working with 16 and 17 year-olds in states that allowed them to volunteer at the polls. This year's survey confirms that most states have taken up this practice, and many are now introducing, expanding or updating such efforts for 2008.

This report highlights some of these programs, along with the rest of the most innovative youth outreach efforts being conducted by secretary of state and state election board offices. While there are a number of programs, practices and laws that stand out among the state profiles, it should be noted that other cutting-edge or innovative efforts may not appear in this report because they were still in development or planning when NASS conducted its survey in December 2007. Readers can follow up with their state office by checking out the appropriate Web site and other resources that offer the latest information.

NASS members also want to call attention to our national outreach partners (listed above and profiled at the end of this report), which work with secretary of state offices to assist with young voter education and outreach, as well as civics education projects. These entities contribute significantly to the success of state efforts in reaching young people, particularly in our public schools and universities. (For more on becoming a NASS partner, visit www.nass.org.)

Judging by recent news reports of high interest in the 2008 presidential race and historic turnout rates among young voters in early primaries, state election officials have good reason to focus on making the election cycle a positive experience for this age group. The increased levels of involvement among 18-24 year-old voters shows just how important it is for states to be investing their resources on educating and and empowering them to take part in our democratic process.

If you have any questions about information in this NASS New Millennium Young Voters Project report, please don't hesitate to contact the person who responded to our survey on behalf of each state office.

Otherwise, questions and comments may be directed to NASS at: nass@sso.org.

NEW for 2007-2008: Nevada will unveil a Web site designed to inform new/young voters about voter registration and voting details and requirements. The site will be accessible through state college Web pages, as well as the Secretary of State Office's Web site. Additionally, the office is designing a polling place locator to allow individuals to look up their voting record, confirm registration, and find polling place details. See details below on new law allowing faxing of ballots for overseas state residents.

Any student attending a Nevada college (whether they came from in-state or out-of state) may vote in Nevada claiming their home address (dorm, off-campus, etc.) as their residence.
- Nevada residents who attend college outside of Nevada may be eligible to vote a Nevada absentee ballot since they do not lose their Nevada residency from attending an out-of state school.
